This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

+ Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
+ Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
+ Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
+ Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. WASHINGTON, D. C.

SINCE the earliest times, at least since the time when superiority was recognized, there has been some way of indicating acknowledged merit. The marking of achievements was a stimulus, even if the insignia were only an oak leaf or a wreath of laurel and its extrinsic value made it the object of endeavor. When the bestowal of prizes became the privilege of autocrat power, rewards for special service took the form of outward signs like the gold chain which Pharoah placed about the neck of Joseph. In Greece and Rome, rings, chains, belts and triumphal gifts conferred a distinction on personal merit, as distinguished from official rank and hereditary nobility. The sash has been employed for ages to indicate functions, rank or privilege.

When physical prowess of the individual combatant prior to the use of gunpowder, gave way to the skill of the marksman and the strategy of a commander, military knighthood, whatever its origin may have been, disappeared but the people, having known the pleasure of distinctions, looked for some visible sign to take the place of the gold or silver spur, the ermine collar or silken sash so when chivalrous men had pious objects in view they claimed an outward mark to give evidence of inward motives.

It is most probable that the earliest order of Knighthood was that of St. John, later known as the Knights of Malta who in 1048 erected a hospital on the spot sanctified, according to tradition, by the "Last Supper." Their insignia, the Maltese Cross, due probably to the Lychnis chalcedonica of the botanists, a flower of Palestine, was the earliest chivalric decoration. It is for this reason that all forms and shapes of decorations are called "crosses."

The history of chivalry is strangely silent upon the inception of grades in the Orders but it is easy to infer that as soon as persons from every walk in life might deserve recognition for worthy achievements, it would be necessary to reward further meritorious acts by promotion, rather than by the creation of new Orders. The Chevalier was originally as now the lowest grade. Superior to that the Officer was natural and higher still Commander. This was the natural limit, but to meet demands for promotion as well as to accommodate the Sovereigns who were Grand Masters of the Orders of their realm, the Marshals' sash, the Grand Cordon, was employed and to it was given the term Grand Croix, usually styled Grand Cross—a break from the French nomenclature. In a few cases an additional grade has been injected between Commander and Grand Cross, styled Grand Officier. Even at the sacrifice of uniformity, the term Chevalier, Officier and Commander are used throughout this work.

It will be observed that in the case of some Orders, the grades are given as classes. The first class being the highest, and if there should be five classes in an Order, their equivalents would be in the sequence given above,—if four, they would be Grand Cross, Commander, Officier and Chevalier.

The number of Orders now existing is not less than 215. This is subject to change by elimination, consolidation or creation of new Orders to commemorate a notable event. It is impossible to give their relative rank, as that varies in different countries. However, there is one—the Order of Ali which has but a single member, the Shah of Persia. The Order of Moreto is conferred only upon the President of the Academy of St. Luke, Rome, but on retiring from office he retains the Order as evidence of past service. Others are family Orders, to which only members of the reigning house are eligible, like the Holy Order of Siam, the Golden Lion of Hesse, etc. In many Orders the number of Citizens is limited and in a very few, only a restricted number of foreigners can be honored. The Black Eagle of Prussia, the White Elephant of Siam, the Garter of England, St. Hubert of Bavaria, St. Alexander of Russia and a few others are for sovereigns or persons marked for special honor. A small number are reserved for persons of noble birth, while at least two, the Crown of Maximilien—Joseph of Bavaria and the Papal Order of Pius IX, confer a noble rank and title.

About thirty Orders are reserved for military service; a hundred are for both civilians and soldiers,—of which a few have special insignias for the latter class; the Merite civil of Prussia with a single class is for distinguished service to science, likewise St. James of Portugal, and Vasa of Sweden. A score of Orders are for women only, like the Louise of Prussia, Marie Louise of Spain and the Chefakat of Turkey, while the Legion of Honor of France is the most noteworthy of those conferred upon both men and women.

In many countries an annual grant is bestowed with the decoration, the amount increasing with the grade and on the death of a member of the Order, there is a military escort at the funeral. For these reasons, amongst others, a native is less easily rewarded for services than is a foreigner, so that it is not gracious for an American Commander to cast deploring glances at the native wearer of the simple knot of ribbon.

It is also true that a citizen of a country can receive in the first instance only the lowest grade and that subsequent promotions can follow only after the lapse of a certain number of years. Thus it might happen that a Chevalier is called to the Ministry and to avoid being outranked by a subordinate, he is given for the time being the Grand Cross which he surrenders when he vacates his high office.

To ridicule decorations is a weak kind of homage to democratic institutions and a gratuitous reflection upon a custom that had its origin and growth under monarchial forms of government. It is especially inconsistent in this country where societies, clubs, and classes of all sorts, ages and races, fraternal, patriotic and problematical have a distinctive button, badge or insignia until an unadorned lapel is as rare as in the most venal principality of the world.

The philosopher and the moralist may decry decorations and call them trivial and the man who has never had the chance to decline a proffer may scoff at the pride shown by a happy wearer, still for many generations they have served a worthy purpose in spite of an occasional debasing. If we applaud noble endeavors, we should look with approval upon evidences of achievement; if we believe in noble striving to outstrip rivals or forge ahead of the great army of plodders, we should welcome the insignia that shows success in the estimation of one who from his exalted position can judge the contest. In its essence it may be vanity, but if vanity can be made a mainspring of human activities whose products benefit mankind, it is wise to utilize this form of thirst for glory and ennoble it by appreciating its merited bestowal and frowning upon each departure from chivalric traditions.

In conferring a decoration, a sovereign seeks to bestow an honor,—it rests with the recipient and his fellow-men to make that honor real. If he holds it in high esteem, he cooperates with the giver in its exalting. Like the quality of mercy, it is twice blessed.

The Constitution of the United States forbids the acceptance on the part of any one holding a position of honor, trust or emolument of any decoration or gift from a foreign prince, power or potentate. Congress alone can give one permission to accept a foreign Order, a favor that has been accorded but once in more than twenty years. In other countries, permission can be granted by the Chancellery of Orders and is seldom refused unless by being of a class inferior to one already held, it degrades the latter.

The reluctance on the part of our Congress to grant the necessary privilege has given rise to misunderstanding and also caused foreign governments to refrain from giving expression to genuine appreciation of services or achievements. It is also true that officials, not having the right to wear their decorations, hesitate to make known the fact of their conferring and for this reason it is impossible to include all in this work.

In all countries where decorations are recognized, strict laws regulate their use and forbid all abuse. Since many of the ribbons are similar in color, certain rosettes are proscribed unless accompanied by a miniature cross.

Officers in uniform wear all decorations of regulation size.

Civilians in "full dress," wear at ordinary festivities, the decorations in miniature. If the function is official the full size of the highest grade can be worn, but if there be a decoration of the land of a lower Order, it too must be full size. In this event it is best to wear all full size.

When attending a court function, all decorations in full size must be worn.

The order of importance of decorations when attached horizontally is from right to left, and when attached vertically, on a bar or chain, it is from the top downwards.

In the text that follows, cravat means the ribbon around the neck on which the cross of Commander is hung.

Usually the difference between the insignia of Officier and Chevalier is that the former is gold (or gilt) and the latter silver. Both are fastened to the lapel or, in the case of uniform, to the coat; Officier insignia by means of a ribbon with a rosette, that of Chevalier, ribbon alone.

No insignia is worn with business suits nor with the coat known as the "Prince Albert." With these the rosette or ribbon is worn in the buttonhole of the lapel.

Note.—When a promotion is granted, the insignia of the lower grade is returned through the Diplomatic Representatives who transmitted the promotion.

Upon the death of a member of certain Orders, the insignia should be returned; this requirement, if it exists, is always mentioned in the diploma.

DOUBLE DRAGON—This Order is the successor of the Imperial Dragon of 1862, which was founded by imperial edict to bestow upon foreigners for services to the Empire.

As at present constituted, the Double Dragon was created February 7, 1862. The significance of Double in the title can be seen in the fact that to natives, buttons, plumes and robes are conferred as insignias, while to foreigners are given jewels similar to the crosses of Western Orders.

The Order of the Double Dragon is of five classes, the highest consisting of three grades each.

The insignia for the two highest grades are oblong, gold-edged yellow enameled plaques, differing only in sizes. For the inferior grades the insignia is round, and differ in size and ornamentation. The most distinguishing feature is the ribbon or cord to which the insignia is attached.

First class, 1st grade, ribbon red embroidered with dragons in gold. First class, 2d and 3d grades, red, dragons in silver. Second class, violet, dragons yellow. Third class, blue, dragons red. Fourth class, marroon, dragons green. Fifth class, "Moonlight," dragons blue.

There is frequently some confusion in the distinction between grades and classes.

DENMARK

THE ORDER OF THE DANNENBROG had, according to tradition, a miraculous origin, and dates back to 1219. The historical beginnings, however, are traced to Christian V who, in 1693, published the statutes of the Order which remained in force until 1808 when Frederick VI raised the Order, which had previously existed as a Court honor, to an Order of Merit, unrestricted as to rank or the number of its members.

Its purpose is to show appreciation of Civil or Military merit, acts of public devotion and services rendered to the State or the King.

FRANCE

LEGION OF HONOR was established as the Order of the Eagle in 1802 (May 19), by Napoleon when First Consul. Prior to the Concordat with Rome, in 1906, the Cross, in reality a star, was so named and has been, since then, called the "Cross."

The insignia has undergone many changes. At one time it bore the effigy of Henry IV, the fleur-de-lis were replaced by the double lances draped with the tricolor and finally the surmounting crown gave place to the wreath of oak and laurel. The present form was adopted by a decree of November 8, 1870.

There are five classes: Grand Cross, scarf and plaque on left side. Grand Officier, cravat and plaque on right side. Commander, cravat. Officier, gold cross on lapel with rosette. Chevalier, silver cross on lapel.

Ribbon, red. Festival days, July 14th and January 1st.

MERITE AGRICOLE—Instituted by a decree of July 7, 1883, to honor persons who have rendered service to agriculture either practically or by investigations and publications.

The original decree was modified in 1887 and 1900. There are three classes: Commander, Officier, and Chevalier. Ribbon is green with red stripe near each edge.

UNIVERSITY PALMS were proposed in 1808 by the decree which organized the University of France. By the Statutes of April 7, 1866, there are two classes:

Officier de l'Instruction publique, gold palms; Officier d'Académie, silver palms.

Ribbon, violet.

As these decorations are ministerial and somewhat freely bestowed, the recipients have not been named in this work.
